FRIDAY, December 3, 1897.

The TIMES guarantees to its advertisers the largest circulation of any paper published in the city of Chanute, or we will make no charge for advertising. Our subscription books are open for the inspection of our patrons.

Marc Hanna advanced the wages of his workmen on an average of 10 per cent. on December first. Wonder what great forbodings of disaster the calams will find in this?

The legislature of Ohio will have fifteen instead of five republican majority on joint ballot, the largest majority of republicans that body has ever had in a year following presidential year.

Since Kan. went over 20,000 republican at the recent election, candidates for governor are springing up everywhere; there are hundreds of good men in the republican party who are well fitted to fill the executive chair, but it is a little early to begin the campaign. The best thing the republican party of Kansas can do is to place a man at the head of the ticket who has not been a standing candidate for office for the past quarter of a century. Let's dig up a man who is not mixed up in any of the factional fights; one who can unite rather than divide the party. The republican party in Kansas must show itself to be bigger than either Baker or Leland. It is all foolishness to let a half dozen men dictate all the nominations or all of the appointments in Kansas. If next year the republican party puts up a representative ticket it will be elected by 40,000 majority.

The indications now are that the democrats are going to ask for a reasonable share of the state ticket next year, which of course the pops will not give them—and the question is, will the democrats be good and vote the pop ticket as they did in 1896 or will they kick the deal overboard. The democrats are willing to deal with any old party that will give them a share of the swag, but in 1896 they got nothing and they seem to be getting tired of the game. This year the democrats put up straight tickets in a number of counties, and in others compelled the pops to give them an even divide, as was the case in this county, but trouble is brewing; the democrats are demanding more while the pops think they have more than their prorate already. Well, let them fight it out, the republicans can lick them united or divided. The republicans who left the party last fall and voted for Bryan did it very slyly, and the vote this year showed that they were coming back as they went, not headed by a brass band and coming down Main street, but are cutting across lots and any old way, but the fact that most of them are back and the rest coming is gratifying to the republicans. The facts are the republican party has always been substantially right on all important questions and the people who believe in a substantial government realize it. There will always be two parties and it makes little difference under what name the opposition to the republican party sails it can always be depended on to have as the main plank in its platform some cheap, easy, tin horn measure that will catch some votes, cut a party founded on principle is bound to win in the long run. The republican party puts up a platform of principles it believes in and asks all good citizens who endorse those principles to join in and help sustain them, and it is generally successful.

Wants Her Branded.

When Minnie Walkup was on trial at Emporia for poisoning her husband, some of the newspapers said she was just like a frightened, trembling fawn pursued by a pack of open-mouthed hounds. She was only seventeen, and very pretty, but she knew enough to marry a rich old man, and so ardently desired his death that she was accused of his murder. As soon as she was released from jail, she went to Chicago and has been doing the trembling frightened fawn act every since.

She turns up now as the mistress of a rich man, and claims to be his wife; if she is the marriage was one of the funny kind. The second husband's death was also suspicious although the facts probably are that whiskey and morphine are responsible for the tabbing off. The woman is only twenty-seven years old now, and as she is foot-loose again, we suggest that the fawn be branded that other old men with money who run across her may be warned in time.—Atchison Globe.

A Hog Cholera Remedy.

Dr. T. J. Dodge, of Hamilton, Ill., writes as follows to the Iowa Homestead on the subject of hog cholera:

As the price of hogs is sufficiently high to pay the farmer to use every means of protecting them from the ravages of the cholera, I deem it my duty to give to the public, free, my receipt for what is termed hog cholera. I have used this remedy for thirty-three years, and raised hogs all of the time, both here and on my ranch in Nebraska and never lost a hog.

Have experimented by placing one well hog with a lot of sick ones and keeping it well by the use of the remedy. You will confer a great blessing on the farmers of our country by publishing this receipt in full in your valuable paper. I am now engaged in other business, and have been for sixteen years, and am willing to let others prosper by the long years of experience of mine with a remedy I discovered myself for the cure of this disease.

The preparation and directions for use are as follows:

Arsenic, one-half pound; cape aloes, one-half pound; blue vitrol, one fourth pound; black antimony, one ounce. Grind and mix well the remedy before using.

The following are directions for using.

First—Sick hogs in all cases to be separated from the well ones and placed in dry pens with only five large one or eight small ones in each pen.

Second—Feed nothing but dry feed but no water, only the slop containing the remedy until cured.

Third—When hogs refuse to eat turn them on their backs, and with a long handled spoon put the dry feed down their throats.

Fourth—Dose for large hogs, one tea spoonful three times a day for three days; then miss one day and repeat until cured. Shoats or pigs one-half the amount.

Fifth—As a preventive one tea spoonful once a week will keep your hogs in a healthy condition to take on fat. I can place one well hog in a pen with one hundred sick ones, and with this remedy keep him well.

Sixth—Let no other stock but hogs have access to this remedy, as it is to them a deadly poison.

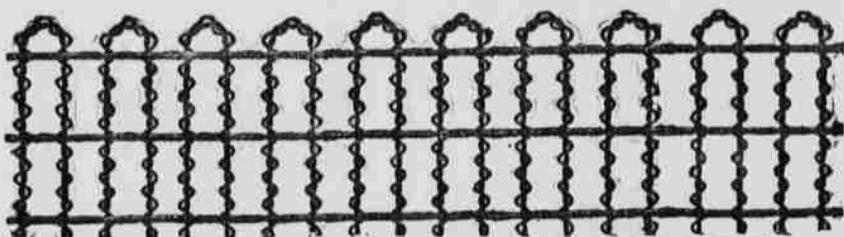

Only a few Kansas towns have voted bonds of late. The people have come to learn that the borrowing of money does not of necessity make the borrower wealthy. That was the theory the Kansas people did business on for many years, but experience has demonstrated that it is a fallacy. It proved disastrous both to borrower and lender. Of course there are a great many men in Kansas who would borrow money and lots of it today if they could; but they have no security to put up, and possibly it is fortunate for them. Every industrious and capable man in Kansas has as much money as his necessities demand, not as much as he wants, of course, but enough to get along with. If it were easy to get he would go in debt for things he doesn't need. On the other hand there is an abundance of money to loan, but the men who have it demand gilt-edge securities. The man with money learns much quicker by experience than the man without. The man who has the money now demands the very best security, when ten years ago he would take a mortgage on any old thing. As a consequence the man who wants to get money has to rely, not on his "gall," but on his security. The results will be more satisfactory to all concerned than were the results ten years ago. The man who doesn't borrow money will not have to pay it back. The man who loans money knows that he will get it again. There is more confidence now, more satisfaction, and more real business than there has been for years before right here in Kansas, and the growth has not been either fungus or cancerous.—Lawrence Journal.
